

Universal Geometric Letters {Taha/Taham} - (Sounds and Movements)

The writing geometric method {Taha} uses separate geometric consonant letters and horizontal short movements or vertical long movements, called Mudood in Quran, which are written above or below the phonetic letters or after them and called Vowels.

The Arabic geometric letters “Alif, Waw, and Yaa” have nothing to do with vowels and are not used as carriers for the Hamzah. Hamzatu -lwasl is just written as a Waslah.

An Arabic letter with a stress is written as two letters, the first one is a static consonant letter and the second one is a dynamic consonant letter. The Arabic letter with Tanween is written as a vowel (a movement from the same type) followed by a static N.

Writing Arabic way {wAw} matches the letters of other languages, such as Latin, with the Reversed Geometric letters {Taham}, and converts them into phonetic languages by using phonetic letters and movements to launch sounds from the mouth or the nose.
